

Dr Deborah Price – President, ACSA and Associate Professor; Associate Head of School (Academic): Professional Engagement and Enterprise, University of South Australia

Dr Deborah Price is Program Director Master of Teaching, School of Education, University of South Australia. Her senior lecturing/research specialisations integrate educational psychology, inclusive and special education, wellbeing, social justice, bullying and inclusive curriculum and pedagogy. She is an active Executive Member of the Australian Curriculum Studies Association (ACSA), conference convener for the ACSA 2015 Biennial Conference, Curriculum Leadership for a Diverse Australia, Convention Centre Adelaide. Dr Deborah Price was recently an invited keynote at the CURRIUCLUM 4 ALL: an Australian Symposium (Australian Special Education Principals Association and Department of Education and Training), May 31, Canberra, ACT and is co-editing a book with Professor Emeritus Alan Reid titled Australian Curriculum: Promises, Problems and Possibilities, published by ACSA and due for release December 2017.

She is committed to contributing to curriculum innovation in promoting inclusive curriculum and responsive pedagogies which maximise achievement for all young learners. This is evidenced in her coordination of a Youthworx SA transdisciplinary research team in Re-engaging youth in education and employment through film making. Embedded within curriculum design is a commitment to advancing wellbeing of learners and educators.

Dr Deborah Price aspires to build on the Australian Curriculum Studies Association quality reputation for leading curriculum debate, design and engagement with key stakeholders in future curriculum planning.

Dr Deborah Price's profile can be viewed at <http://people.unisa.edu.au/Debbie.Price>